

ASSAYERS SUPPLIES

A FULL LINE

—AT—

Ezra W. Thayer's

124 and 126 East Washington Street,

—ALSO—

MINE

AND CAMP

SUPPLIES

AS A SUBSTITUTE FOR HANGING.

Novel Recommendation Submitted By Baltimore Grand Jury.

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 15.—The grand jury for the May term upon being discharged today by Judge Dobler, in the criminal court, made the following suggestion in its report:

"The punishment of death, whether judicially or illegally carried out, would be considered the most effective punishment for rape which could be inflicted; it having failed, however, in its results, we would suggest castration and imprisonment in all cases of conviction instead of hanging.

"This punishment, unquestionably, will prevent the criminal from again committing this crime, and he will become a marked object and a living warning, which we think will cause others of the same brutal propensities to hesitate before they give way to their passions."

TWO MEN MEET DEATH.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 15.—Merten Hunsinger, aged 25, a teamster, was instantly killed near Red House, Garrett county, yesterday, by the fall of a tree in the camp of the Preston Lumber and Coal company. Joseph Ervine, aged 20, living near Oakland, accidentally shot himself through the body, death ensuing in a few hours.

FORCED TO JUMP IN THE BAY.

Mamie Cobb Rescued From Drowning Under Strange Circumstances.

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 15.—A mysterious case was developed by the trial of Mamie Cobb, a young white woman, charged with drunkenness in the police court today. The woman narrowly escaped being drowned at the Norfolk and Western docks late Thursday night, and was rescued by J. B. Black as she sank for the third time.

Patrolman Sweeney, who appeared on the scene immediately afterward, declares that the woman was, according to his investigation, forced to jump overboard by a man, who disappeared as soon as she jumped. Henry Roane, colored, asserts that he heard the man threaten and abuse the woman, who was too intoxicated to resist.

SYSTEM FOR SHIPBUILDING.

Representative Foss Believes in a Naval Policy Board.

Washington, Sept. 15.—Representative Foss of Chicago, whose recent trip through Europe has attracted much attention, particularly his conference with Emperor William and Admiral Dewey, arrived here today and went to the White House for a talk with the president. Mr. Foss is the author of the personnel bill, which has worked such complete reorganization in the navy, and his trip abroad was mainly to observe the administration of foreign naval affairs.

"I went into the prominent navy and ship building yards everywhere,

The Miller Derby

FALL, 1899

THE hat of the season is here, and here only. May we show it to you?

We have the sole local agency for the sale of the Miller Derby, the very highest type of a hat in every particular.

The John B. Stetson Co., of Philadelphia, makes this royally good bit of headwear.

The pleasing powers and general reliability of the Stetson products have built the biggest factory for the making of fine hats in the world and keep 1,200 employees busy satisfying the demand that comes from all over the world.

GREENE, THE HATTER

Fleming Block,

Investigated the subjects of docks, which is an important one with us; visited marine barracks and armor plate plants, studied the subjects of a national naval reserve and of a naval policy board. I am convinced that we will have to adopt some system about building up our navy. We cannot get along building a battleship one year, and none next; now building torpedo boats, and then leaving their construction off. At this rate we will soon have a top-heaviness in one class of ships and a shortage in others. This means, I insist, that we must have a system about ship building, and that what is necessary is a naval policy board.

"I found the greatest activity in all the navy yards of the old world. I think we must also commence the erection of important stone docks. In England stone is used altogether in the immense docks. England builds her docks for eternity, while we build for time."

Speaking of his incident with Kaiser Wilhelm, Mr. Foss said: "Germany is a great country. Kaiser Wilhelm is forceful and energetic. In typical western language, he is a hustler. He told me there was no reason why Germany and the United States should not always be on good terms."

CISSY LOFTUS DISSATISFIED.

Withdraws From Weber & Fields' Burlesque Company.

New York, Sept. 15.—Miss Cissy Loftus will not be a member of Weber & Fields' burlesque company this season.

Miss Loftus for some time has not been entirely satisfied with the treatment accorded her by the burlesque managers, and this morning informed Mr. Fields that she wished to withdraw from the company. A lively little scene followed. Mr. Fields argued, and even threatened, but all to no avail. Miss Loftus' mind was made up. She did not like the part that had been assigned her in the new burlesque, and she wouldn't play it.

"We offered to have her part rewritten to suit her," said Irving E. Pinover, manager for Weber & Fields, tonight. "She wouldn't listen, though. We shall certainly take steps to prevent her playing anywhere else."

Mr. Pinover added that every effort had been made to get Miss Loftus to reconsider her action, and that, owing to her withdrawal, it had been found necessary to postpone the production of the burlesque until September 21.

On this point Miss Loftus said that the costumer had informed her several days ago that the production could not possibly be ready until that date in any case.

THE NEWS OF CONGRESS

Congress, Ariz., Sept. 14.—(Special Correspondence of The Republican.)—Last night a large crowd filled the school house to listen to an entertainment given by the Pocahontas lodge.

The children received their training at the hands of Mr. and Mrs. Loman, and a good deal of the successful work on the part of the children and the rest of the entertainers is due to their persistent work. The entertainment opened by Edwards and Jackson; perhaps more familiarly known as the "Kings of Harmony," playing a very pretty piece on the mandolin and guitar. The next number on the programme was "A Children's May Pole." The colored strings on the May pole got somewhat twisted and the curtain was rung down. Susie Watson then rendered a very pretty recitation which seemed to take the crowd, as pandemonium reigned for several minutes. Recitations by Lillian Waters, Mary Perolla and Adeline Webster were well rendered and appreciated.

Dolly Webster, a 3-year-old tot, next gave a very pretty exhibition of skirt dancing that captured the hearts of the audience. The singing of C. Lamare and Winnie Penching was very good.

Mr. C. Hess followed by singing "Two Sweethearts," which was well received. C. Stanford and Susie Wilson captured every heart by a pretty piece of acting in a dialogue entitled "Have I Something to Say?"

Bert Lamar recited a pretty recitation entitled "A Miner's Home," which was composed for the occasion by E. P. White, formerly a resident of Phoenix.

The "Kings of Harmony" rendered a pretty comic duet entitled "Why Don't You Get a Lady of Your Own?"

Messrs. J. Harter, B. Drumler and the Messrs. C. Chynoweth and Kittie Harter followed in a series of war tableaux which were very pretty and entertaining. Miss Cecil Reese captivated the audience by singing "Only One Girl."

Louellen Jones recited two recitations in succession that tickled the audience immensely. Susie Watson's skirt dancing was a feature, as was also the singing of C. H. White. Dancing followed the entertainment, which was given by the "Kings of Harmony."

E. S. Jones, manager of the Congress Gold company's store, returned to Congress last night after a month's business trip in the eastern cities.

W. Delitz left for San Francisco to recuperate his failing health.

The Congress Gold company's ball team defeated the Stars last Sunday by a score of 8 to 6. The Stars are improving rapidly in their playing.

A. N. Gage, secretary for the Congress Gold company, is a very busy man these days, the office force being diminished by the absence of Mr. Delitz.

Mrs. J. Wescott is on the sick list.

escape our climate, but says he prefers Arizona during the fall and winter.

Miss White returned from the valley a few days ago to be in readiness to take charge of one of the school departments.

Professor Gaines of Missouri arrived in Congress last night and will take charge of the school next week. Edwards and Jackson (the Kings of Harmony) will leave for the Orpheum at Denver in a few days. Messrs. Edwards and Jackson are vocalists of marked ability and we wish them a successful run at that house.

THE NEWS OF YUMA

Yuma, Ariz., Sept. 15.—(Special Correspondence of The Republican.)—Outside of Phoenix, Yuma seems to be the most prosperous town in Arizona. It is difficult to conceive how the growing town on the Colorado river could help plunging ahead in general improvement and wealth. It has all the elements to help make a large and prosperous city. The broad Colorado river's periodical overflow on both sides of its embankment, leaving there fertile alluvial deposits from the mountains, make the soil exceedingly rich and the results are an abundance of large luscious fruit and cereals which find ready markets in southern California, and easterly to El Paso. All the mines in the environs of Yuma are looking well. The Fortuna continues to yield its harvest of yellow metal; also a number of valuable mines in Castle Dome, the Gold King, seventy miles from the town, will soon surprise the world with its immense output of gold. Other mines within a radius of a hundred miles contribute to enrich the metropolis of the Colorado river. The town is improving rapidly.

The Hotel Gandolfo, a large two-story brick, with basement, with 200 feet frontage on the principal street, is nearing completion. It will be a fine and much needed hotel. The large hall built therein expressly for the order of Elks will be occupied by the society next week.

Mr. Sanguinetti, Gandolfo's former partner, whose large general merchandise store was consumed by fire, has removed to the largest store room in the Gandolfo hotel block. A large two-story brick will be built on the ruins of the last big fire. I noticed a number of other new business edifices, a handsome new Catholic church, and a score of cozy residences that were not extant six months ago.

No one complains of hard times. On the contrary, the invariable reply to a stranger's query, "How is business?" is "Pretty good" or "Can't complain." Everybody has money and plenty of it, and Yuma promises to be one of the most important agricultural and mining cities in the southwest.

A great number of Phoenix papers are circulated in Yuma. Visitors see them promiscuously scattered over tables, counters, and chairs in every store, office and residence. Musical taste is developing largely. A Rede-will disposed of six pianos during his short sojourn in the town.

FOREIGN NOTES AND COMMENT

St Julian Pauncetote is in no sense of the word to blame for having used the name of the old Norman name of Pauncetote (a corruption of Pauncetote), whereas the real patronymic of his family is Smith. It was his father, and not he, who abandoned the name of Smith for that of Pauncetote. The Smith family to which the new Lord Pauncetote belongs is rather a distinguished one for its foodness for changing its name. Thus his father was the great grandson of a Nottingham banker of the name of Abel Smith. The latter had three sons—George, who changed his name to Bromley, which his descendants now bear, the head of the house being Sir Henry Bromley; Robert, the second son, who changed his name to Carrington on being made a peer for the services which he rendered as a banker to Pitt, England's most famous premier, and John, the third son, who was the ancestor, it is said, the great grandfather of the new Lord Pauncetote. Thus of the original family of Abel Smith, the Nottingham banker, not a single descendant bearing the name of Smith now remains.

The first Lord Carrington, the brother of Lord Pauncetote's great grandfather, was the man whose elevation to the peerage was so strongly resisted by King George III, who finally gave way in a very ungracious manner to Premier Pitt on the subject, grunting: "Well, I'll make your friend a peer, but I can't make him a gentleman." There is a very ancient and noble house of Pauncetote, which spells its name, however, in a slightly different manner, "Pauncetote," and it is stated that they express resentment at the British ambassador at Washington assuming the name of Lord Pauncetote. The head of the old Pauncetote family is Sir Henry Pauncetote-Duncombe, and although his baronetcy is of relatively modern creation, yet he is able to trace back his ancestry in an unbroken line to that Geoffrey de Pauncetote who was King Edward of the household to King John. In the great Domesday Book it is likewise on record that the Pauncetote family was in possession of "fair lands in the county of Gloucester," in the reign of William the Conqueror, that is to say, nine centuries ago.

There is no truth whatsoever in the announcement of the bathrover in the Archduke Francis Ferdinand, heir apparent to the throne of Austria, and Grand Duchess Helene of Russia, who recently jilted the now crazy Prince Max of Baden. Those responsible for the circulation of this story are evidently unaware of the existence of a clause in the constitution of Austria-Hungary, and in the laws of Austrian succession, which forbids the heir to the throne from marrying any princess who is not a Catholic by birth. In all the history of Europe there has only been one solitary instance of a marriage between a Russian grand duchess and a Hapsburg archduke. The latter

MOTHER'S BREAD

IS MADE

From the best flour that money can buy. In a light, airy, well ventilated shop. By expert bakers.

IS HANDLED

Wrapped in wax paper, which keeps it clean, moist and fresh.

IS SOLD

By all leading grocers.

IS CONSUMED

By those who want the best—know when they have found it—and insist on having it always.

ARIZONA -- BAKERY,

was exceedingly remote to the succession of the throne. Otherwise the match would not have taken place. It did not turn out altogether happily, and after her death there were some very painful incidents in connection with ghoulish attempts to destroy the mausoleum in which she reposed near Pesth that excited intense popular indignation in Russia. It must thoroughly be understood that the chieftain of Archduke Francis Ferdinand in looking for a wife, picked this young girl out of a restricted circle exclusively to royal and imperial princesses, who have been born and reared as Roman Catholics, and who belong to Roman Catholic families.

I observe that young Count Karmel, son of the marquis of that ilk, who was formerly aide of the papal zouaves, has just become engaged to be married to the only daughter of a very wealthy French engineer of the name of Villar, who has a handsome residence in Paris on the Boulevard Malesherbes and a country seat in the vicinity of the capital. This young nobleman, whose mother was a Miss Kearney of New Jersey, spent some time in this country, and was the hero of all sorts of sensational episodes a few years ago, which comprised his being locked up both in prison and in a sanitarium, and on one occasion, when he endeavored to take his way to Europe as a stowaway on the same liner as that on which his maternal grandfather was traveling, he was discovered before the Sandy Hook pilot left the vessel and put aboard the pilot boat. In fact, there is no end to the sensational episodes with which the name of this exceedingly turbulent young man was connected on this side of the water. It is to be hoped that he will be steadied by marriage. The projected union will provide for his maternal welfare, as his bride is an heiress.

One of the features of English life among the upper classes is the celebration of the coming of age—the twenty-first birthday—of the heir to landed property. There have been quite a number of young peers who have come of age during the past year, and the enthusiastic part taken in the festivities by the tenants, the working classes and the people of the district indicate a very happy and pleasant condition of affairs between the great land owners and their tenants, and employees, the condition of affairs all the more remarkable in view of the animosity that prevails in so many other cases between the employers and the employed. The coming of age celebration is something more than a mere jollification. It is the occasion when the tenants, the working classes, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the youth himself is brought face to face with the sense of the great moral and material responsibilities that the possession of land and, in particular, the working estates, the tradespeople, etc., of the district are for the first time brought into contact and into direct relations with the master, and their patron; in fact, the English upper classes have a character much of the happiness and prosperity of the locality will depend. On the other hand, the